

In the early 1900s, industrial Wallingford thrived along and near the Lake Union waterfront, a significant place in Indigenous Coast Salish tradition. A streetcar neighborhood developed uphill with residences and small shops. This tour spotlights the area's Indigenous tradition, industrial landscape, popularly styled early 20th-century buildings, as well as artistic and natural sensory delights. Explore these highlights in any order.

Please remain on publicly accessible sidewalks and paths while observing features highlighted in this brochure.

Westerman Apartments
3630 WALLINGFORD AVE N

Multi-family housing was an important part of Wallingford in the booming 1920s. The 1924 Westerman Apartments had 4 units and later operated as a nursing home from 1949 into the 1970s.

Completed in 2002, the Wallingford Steps connect the bottom of Wallingford Ave. to the Burke-Gilman Trail and Gas Works Park. A colorful mosaic beautifies the steps.
